We consume much of our space this week with mammoth advertisements. They will only run two weeks. We hope our subscribers will not grumble. These advertisements pay us; and that is more than we can say for some of our subscribers.

If people don't believe that Aniston means business, they have only to look at our local page. The Woodstock Company set an example worthy of imitation by the Cross Plains, Jacksonville, White Plains, Alexandria, Weaver's Station and Oxford merchants. If it will pay the Woodstock Company to advertise, it will pay every merchant in the county.

Gov. Cobb has appointed Prof. H. M. Summerville, the head of the law department of the University of Alabama, Supreme Court Judge to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Manning.

Sells circus will only exhibit at Oxford in this county, and Calhounites who want to see it will have to go there. Very high charges for moving their cars on the S. R. & D. R. R. is the cause of their not stopping over at short distances, as stated by the agent. They say the road would have charged between three and four hundred dollars for moving them from Oxford to this place.

Notice is directed to the advertisement of G. W. Peterson's farming implements. They have proven highly successful wherever used, and we are glad to know that his patents are proving remunerative to the inventor. Nothing better has ever been seen in this country. They have only to be seen to sell.

Mrs. Toole, wife of Col. Toole, advance agent of Sells circus, gave us a pleasant call Thursday.

Owing to the bad weather, not so many people attended the supper at the Academy, Friday night, the 24th ult., given by the ladies of the Presbyterian church, as would otherwise have been the case. Still a fair number were present. The table was richly spread. The receipts no doubt justified the trouble and outlay of the ladies.

Mr. Larkin D. Cannon, left for the University of Alabama, Wednesday.
J. W. Morgan, (uncle Wash as he is familiarly called) on last Monday, while sitting a piece of wood, cut his foot from the instep to the toes, thereby inflicting a very deep and dangerous wound. Dr. Hughes, his attending physician doubts his recovery.

The paper is so crowded with advertisements this week that we are compelled to condense the Oxford local items.
Cotton Sept. 30th 9 to 10 1/2. About 600 bales shipped from Oxford to date. The estimable wife of John P. Spencer, formerly of Oxford, died in Columbus Sept. 24. Wm. N. Cunningham died Sept. 25. "Squire S." got a bug in his ear and had to drown it out. Our correspondent humorously described the unjudicial antics of the "Squire" when the bug first struck his ear and began explorations. The Quaker lecturer has been to Oxford. He reached Jacksonville from Oxford, and, being a stranger, took us in also.

Abernathy Mills grinds and bolts flour, corn, shelled, 2c.

Mr. John M. Patterson, of this county, left for Selma Wednesday with his little daughter, to have Dr. Clarke remove, with the knife, a melan seed that became lodged in her windpipe some time ago.
Since writing the above, we have received a letter from Mr. Patterson, dated Selma, Sep. 30th, in which he says he is the guest of Dr. Clark and treated very kindly by his family; that the Dr. thinks he can successfully perform the operation; and he (Mr. Patterson) will not reach home until Sunday.

CROSS PLAINS LOCALS.
Our town is on a big boom, every house is occupied, and a great demand for houses, both business and dwelling.
Cotton pouring in from all points of the compass. Selling this week for 10 1/2 to 11 1/2. Five buyers regularly in the field.
Our two steam cotton gins are running day and night trying to accommodate customers.
The saw and hammer may be heard from morning till night. In fact, everything betokens lively times.
So far, we have received about four times as much cotton as we received up to this time last year. Plenty of goods here for the least money. More anon.

REPORTER
To THE CITIZENS OF GERMANIA AND JACKSONVILLE.

DEAR FRIENDS:
What inducements will you offer for the erection of a Preparatory Agricultural school for the colored people in either of your communities? We want to build one somewhere in this county, and it is our earnest desire to build it either at Germania or Jacksonville, if the citizens of these places will only contribute liberally to its cause. We will build it in the place that contributes the largest sum of money for its erection. We want to edify man and to glorify God. Now dear citizens, this is a grand opportunity to show your interest in edifying this degraded race. Now is the time to give of your means, if you wish to see better days. Now is the time if you wish to see your farms cultivated intelligently. I hope that our white friends who have the means will contribute liberally because you can see the great destruction done to our country by ignorant men, women and children. They take no interest in your work for the money that you pay them for their hire. Why is it? Because they are untaught. Why are your farms so lagged up? It is for the want of agricultural education. Why are this people so low in morals? It is for want of mental culture. Now dear citizens, do you not see the great danger in allowing such ignorant men to remain so among intelligent people. They will destroy our country through their ignorance. Who will contribute $50.00 or $100.00 for its erection? Who will give three pennies? Some of you are in doubt about its success. But if we never try or begin it it will never bring itself right. Now then let each and every one go to work and get this school ready to start the first of Dec. It can be done and must be done. Now remember that God holds each man accountable for the ignorance about them when they have power to remove it. Hoping to see and hear from you soon.

Yours Respectfully,
IVY B. McALPINE.
Present Sec'y.

THE GEORGE WASHINGTON EXHIBITION.

The One Show that Des Exhibits All its Advertisements.
Sells Brother's World's Fair of Wonders, and World-famous Menagerie and Circus, which is to exhibit at Rome Oct. 4th, Oxford, Saturday, Oct. 16th as a prelude to the thoroughness of its everything else, and prices itself upon filling its vast tents, not by wholesale misrepresentation, but through honestly filling its bills in every respect, and presenting everywhere every feature advertised. This is the secret of its tremendous popularity and success, and justifies the press everywhere in lending it the aid of its powerful voice. It gave exhibitions in Louisville on September 3rd and 4th, and here is what the Courier-Journal says of it:
"The audience last night numbered at least ten thousand. The advertisement of the circus put forth big claims that were fully justified. The show stands for itself. It is the best beyond question, on the road. The living hippopotamus was made to walk around the ring and show their beautiful features to the crowd. A herd of six performing Colorado cattle, presented a novel spectacle, and gave evidence of good intelligence. The human-sized ape, which rode bareback, was another remarkable constituent of the show. It went through nearly all the feats done by human or monkey riders, and was greeted with greatest enthusiasm. The performing dogs had several fresh acts in their repertoire and pleased the crowd immensely. Fourteen performing thoroughbred horses presented a beautiful sight. The show exhibited with an excellent bareback exhibition, full of wild and daring feats. The Sells Bros. are to be congratulated on the excellent circus and menagerie they have collected. In no respect have they failed to give what they promised, and their exhibition is heartily recommended to the patronage of other cities as one that is worthy of all that is claimed for it."

INTERESTING TO FARMERS.
The Best Hillside Plow, Walking Cultivator, and Single Plow ever invented.
The undersigned prepared patents the 16th day of June 1878, for a hillside plow, a walking cultivator, and a single plow, and agricultural implements, and since their invention began they have been thoroughly tested and in every instance have given entire satisfaction.
They are made of wrought iron and any blacksmith can repair one. The hillside plow is acknowledged to be the best on the market, doing its work to perfection. The walking cultivator carries eleven rows of different kinds, two at a time, and cultivated out on an arrow to the row. It is self-adjusting. In short one man and horse can do the work of two with it, and do it better than with a single plow. I claim for the single plow that the iron stock can be put up cheaper than the wooden stock, and answers for double team.

from the hip pocket of another actor to present it to the heroine with some glowing words. The other actor, Snigg, was somewhat addicted to the use of liquor, and while he dressed for the performance he got too full and went to sleep. Then some of the other actors removed the handkerchief from his pocket, and cutting a hole in the pocket, drew a corner of Mr. Snigg's shirt into it. It was a peculiarity of Mr. Masher that when he acted he got so dead in earnest that nothing could stop him, and when it came to the handkerchief scene, and he rushed, he went to the only half awake Snigg, he grabbed for the handkerchief and found it didn't come, but he failed to notice the situation. The piece couldn't go on and he produced the handkerchief. The girls gave another desperate "A-g-o-o-o-o!" The result was that a wild look came over his face, and he turned to the girls and said:

Masher: that there was something wrong. But Masher didn't understand. The people were waiting for him to make an awkward pause. Masher was a man of great strength and he gave last desperate tug at what he believed was the handkerchief. It came, with a sound of tearing, and Snigg yanked quite off his feet, and his eyes nearly burst from their sockets from the pressure on his throat; but the neckband broke. Masher got rid of the garment except the sleeves, the sudden disappearance of Snigg's shirt-bosom created much excitement in the audience. Even then, Masher didn't notice what he had done, he rushed forward tending the garment to the heroine. But she screamed faintly and the audience began to yell and Snigg, having recovered his breath, became terribly mad and made a rush at Masher with a property sword.

The castle, an Elizabethan structure, is finely placed on the summit of a hill, and on its improvement, and that of its grounds the great patron has already expended many thousands of pounds. ## GRANDPA'S BARN.

Oh a jolly old place is grandpa's barn,
Where the doors stand open throughout The day,
And the cooling doves fly in and out,
And the air is sweet with the fragrant hay;
Where grain lies over the slippery floor,
And the hens are busily looking around,
And the sunbeams flicker, now here, now There,
And the breeze blows through with a Merry sound,
The swallows twitter and chirp all day,
With fluttering wings, in the old brown Eaves,
And the robins sing in the trees which lean
To brush the roof with their rustling leaves.
O for the glad vacation time,
When grandpa's barn will echo the shout
Of merry children, who roam and play
In the new-born freedom of school let out,
Such searing of doves from their cozy nests,
Such hunting for eggs in the lofty High,
Till the frightened hens, with a cackle Shrill,
From their hidden treasures are fain to Fly.
Oh, the dear old barn, so cool, so wide!
Its doors will open again ere long
To the summer sunshine, the new-mown Hay,
And the merry ring of vacation songs.
For grandpa's barn is the jolliest place
For frolic and fun on a summer's day;
And o'er old time, as the years slip by,
Its memory never can steal away.

Margaret's Money.

"She has five thousand pounds," said the old man, "and she's a good girl. She'll be a catch for somebody."
Then I thought he looked at me.
"Why should he look at me?" I thought, "I'm not a husband worth anything for, as he knows very well, this man who pays me my small salary every week with his own hands."
Still he did look at me, and I answered with a word or two I forget what now.
"Yes," he said, "talking with a meaning, too, looking at me evidently, to see how I took the news, 'yes; and what do you suppose she does with it? Has it locked up in my fire-proof safe in my fire-proof vault, don't use it in any way, don't get interest on it; locks it up as she does her rings and pins and lets it lie never touched."
"I wonder you don't give her better advice," I said.
"Give a woman advice!" he said. "Try it. However, I approve of this. Better keep her dowry locked up safe, than risk and lose it. My fire-proof safe and fire-proof vault will hold her money—the money her husband is to have the day he marries her last and safe."
Then the old man trotted away to his own desk, and looked over at me.
"I'm her guardian," he said. "Her father and I had quarrelled, you know. But when he died, he left her and her money in my care. A nice thing for an old bachelor to have, a young niece quartered on him for life! I'll marry her off as soon as I can. I say, Fisher, come up and take tea with me to-night."
He did mean it! He offered his niece and her five thousand pounds to me! He had never liked me either.
"Shall I go?" I asked myself. "Why not? I might as well see the heiress. I was not a man to be bought by money, it was a mere, vulgar creature, like her uncle; but otherwise, why not see what she was made of? At least it could do no harm to take tea with old Simon Giddings. I went home with him that evening. I noticed some little changes in the parlor, as though a lady's hands had been busy there; and in a moment more I saw, sitting in the shadow of the curtains, a girl dressed in deep mourning.
"Margaret, Mr. Fisher, my niece, Miss Giddings, Tom," said the old man; and as I bowed, I saw a little velvet-headed crutch leaning against the girl's chair.
She was lame, then. Old Giddings thought this was an obstacle to her making a good match. So he offered her to Tom Fisher.
"I won't do, old man," I thought. "I shouldn't mind a plain face so much, but a lame wife will never do for me."
Then something whispered faintly in my ear, "Five thousand pounds!"
For the rest, Miss Giddings was fair and sweet-looking, and pleasant in her manner. She was a lady, too, which seemed odd for old Simon's niece, for he was as vulgar as he was rich; and she sang to us after tea very sweetly.
I liked a girl with dash and color, but still her blue eyes and sweet smile haunted me a little after I went home. "She'll never quarrel with one," I thought; "and a woman worth five thousand pounds would be a catch, certainly; but that crutch! I'll stay away from Old Simon's house for the future."
But he would not let me stay away; he kept on urging me to go home with him. There was Marion More. Perhaps she liked me a little. I admired her intensely; but she had no money, and I should take her away from her snug home to some poor sort of place if I married her. I should find it hard work to feed and clothe her decently.
This fair, sweet Margaret was rich; and as time passed on, I began to see her liking for me. And I sat in the office one day, three months from the time of my first visit, wondering whether I could be quite sure that I should be good enough to the little thing I meant to marry for her money, to keep her from knowing that there was no actual love for her in my heart. And as I pondered, the voice of old

Sim reached my ears:—"Tom Fisher up in the moon again, eh? Well, well, when a fellow is in love we excuse laziness in him. There's my niece Margaret pouring the milk at breakfast. 'Maggie,' says I, 'you're a thinking of some one, ain't ye? She blushed to her ears. You've managed to get into good graces in that quarter, Tom?'
"Do you think so?" I said.
"I know so," said the old man. "I oughtn't to say so, you know, but I'm frank."
I listened to him, then two voices whispering to me:
"You don't love her," said one. "You don't hate her," said the other. "You don't want a lame wife," said the first. "You do want five thousand pounds," said the other. It would make a man of you. You could go into business on your own account. You'd cease to be a slave in this dingy office."
"Five thousand pounds!" I said to myself. Then I started to my feet.
"Mr. Giddings," I said, "would you be willing to give your niece to me as my wife?"
His answer was faint.
"Tom Fisher, I'd give her to any decent young man. A girl bothers me; I'm tired of the charge. Every one don't want a same wife. If you like her, take her, and on your wedding day, I'll hand the five thousand pounds to you, and be rid of the charge. She'll say 'Yes,' don't fear. I'll tell her that you asked me to-night, and hurry on the wedding."

I thought I heard the thump of a crutch in the church aisle as he spoke. I thought of the graceful step of Marion More. I turned faint, and sat down to my desk; but I went to old Simon's house that night, and saw Margaret. She looked as fair and happy as a child. I sat down by her and took her hand.
"Are you going to say 'No,' Maggie?" I said, and she lifted her innocent lips to mine, and kissed me. "I'll be good to her," I said to myself. "I'll be very, very good to her."
But there was no lover's warmth in my heart; only a kind of gentle pity for the girl who was to bring me five thousand pounds.
We were engaged. Old Simon joked us coarsely, and seemed to exult over the affair. I might even have doubted of the existence of the five thousand pounds, but that Maggie told me of them herself.
"Uncle was keeping them for me to live on, when I was an old maid," she said. "But you shall do what you choose with the money when I belong to you. We'll buy a pretty house, shan't we dear, first of all, and live there all our lives; somewhere where we can have a garden?"
So, after that, I never doubted, but clung to the idea as I could not if I had loved the girl.
We were married in a fortnight. Uncle Simon and his old house-keeper alone were present. It had touched me a good deal when Margaret had whispered that she had rather not have a wedding party.
"Fancy the bride limping up the aisle upon a crutch!" she said. "Let me be married with none to stare at me. You love me so I don't care about being lame any more, but I'd rather not be stared at."
I took her in my arms and kissed her then.
"I'll be good to her," I said, as the clergyman uttered his prayer,—"very, very good;" and I was saying it again when I was at with my wife in Old Simon's parlor in the twilight, and he coming in, lit the gas, and stood twinking his eyes at us maliciously.
"So it's over," he said, with his fiendish chuckle. "She's yours now for her five thousand pounds. I'm going to hand it over to-night. I shall sleep better." I blushed with shame. "Not yet," I said; "don't talk of money yet!"
"Not!" said Simon. "But I will though. I've got it here." And he unlocked a side-board which stood in the room, and brought out a small roll done up oddly enough in brown paper. There it is," said he, "there it is! Look at it—count it. Five thousand pounds—count it."
He fairly grinned as he spoke. She smiled.

I saw something in his laugh that made me shudder. Without a word more I walked to the table, opened the parcel and spread out the notes. There were five thousand pounds worth of them, reading the value on their faces, but they were the notes of the Diddleton and Bilkem Bank, which had failed years ago!
I had been deceived. The girl I had married was penniless!
"Impostor!" I yelled. Old Simon answered with a roar of laughter.
"Good joke," he said. "I've done what I promised. You've got the five thousand; I didn't tell you it was in. Of course such money is of no use to you, but I can't help that. Ha! ha!"
I think I should have given him a blow, but just then I heard Margaret scream. I looked at her. I saw, as I had known before, that she had no hand in the deception. I saw an awful look on her lip. I doubt of my love trembling on her lip. I saw her rise and falter on her poor feet, and stretch her hands towards me.
I heard her cry, "Thomas, I did not know; and then—oh, thank God for it—the love I had never felt before rushed into my heart—a great, all-conquering love.
I ran to her. I took her in my arms. I gave her the first kiss of passionate and new-born love, and I said, "Margaret, try to bear poverty with me, for I love you better than my soul."

And all Margaret's money—the money that had faded before me like fairy gold—could never have given me half the joy that the wealth of love, given to and received from her, gave me upon our bridal day—gave me in all the first struggling years of our wedded life, and will give me, God grant it, until the end!

Woodcock.

Bogardus, in his work on "Field, Cover and Trap Shooting," says that to make a good bag of woodcock is a feat the sportsman may well be proud of. To meet with success in woodcock-shooting, one must be an excellent snapper-shot and possess a fearless nerve and muscular organization. Bogardus, in his work on "Field, Cover and Trap Shooting," says that to make a good bag of woodcock is a feat the sportsman may well be proud of. To meet with success in woodcock-shooting, one must be an excellent snapper-shot and possess a fearless nerve and muscular organization. To meet with success in woodcock-shooting, one must be an excellent snapper-shot and possess a fearless nerve and muscular organization.

Generally speaking the woodcock is a hard bird to hit. Josh Billings, in an article on birds, says of the woodcock that the first that is seen of the bird is a "whizz, and the last we see is a whizz." In shooting among the saplings the shooter must follow the dog and take his chances with snap shots. In low underbrush and later in the season among the corn fields, some open shots are obtained. The uncertain flight of the woodcock as he rises in his zig-zag flight tends to distract the aim of the shooter, and the success of the novice is very uncertain.

Perils of the London Streets.

It has been calculated that the yearly average of persons killed by accidents in the streets of London is greater than the annual total of persons massacred on all the railways of the United Kingdom. During the last decade of the victims of the thoroughfares the metropolis have reached an aggregate of 2195, while in 28-30 cases more or less injuries have been inflicted. These statistics are startling, and they signify in reality more than at first appears. Only the known injuries are enumerated under the published categories. There is a considerable percentage of casualties which does not find its way into print, and when it is said last year the killed and wounded in the London streets amounted to 324 and 3690 respectively, it must be remembered that the estimate is reduced to a minimum. The allowance of unascertained accidents may be calculated upon as that of undetected murders. Alarming as these figures seem, there is nothing surprising in them when one recoils upon what are the facts and what the perils of the case. A population of 4,000,000; streets traversed by perpetual streams of traffic; the number of vehicles of different kinds which daily pass up and down Oxford streets is computed at 11,891; thoroughfares often absurdly inadequate for the exigencies of the present day; foot-passengers in swarms, frequently indifferent to all considerations of personal safety; drivers of every variety of carriages and reckless—these are the chief features of the situation.

Fate of a Fool.

Once, when I was returning from Ireland (says Rowland Hill), I found myself annoyed by the reproachful conduct of the captain and mate, who were both badly given to the scandalous habit of swearing. First, the captain swore at the mate; then the mate swore at the captain; then they swore at the wind, when I called out to them for fair play.
"Stop! stop!" I said, "if you please gentlemen, it is my turn now."
"Ah, what is your turn, pray?" said the captain.
"Swearing," I replied.
Well, they waited and waited, until their patience was exhausted, and then wanted me to make haste and take my turn. I told them, however, that I had a right to take my own time, and swear at my own convenience.
To this, the captain replied with a laugh, "Perhaps you don't mean to take your turn?"
"Pardon me captain," I answered, "but I do, as soon as I can find the good of doing so." I did not hear another oath on the voyage.

The Wooden Hat.

Somewhere about the year 1780, a traveling mill-wright, footsore, and with the broadest northern Doric accent, stopped at Soho, at the engine factory of Boulton & Watt, and asked for work. His aspect was a little better than one of beggary and poor looks, and Boulton had hidden him God speed to some other shop, when, as he was turning away sorrowfully, Boulton suddenly called him back.
"What kind of a hat's you, ye have on your head me mon?"
"It's just timber, sir."
"Timber, me mon; let's look at it. Where did ye get it?"
"I just made it, sir, my ainsel."
"How did you make it?"
"I just turned it in the lathe."
"But it's oval, mon, and the lathe turns things round."
"A well! I just gar'd the lathe gang another gap, to please me, and I thoct to have a hat to keep out water, and I hadna muckle siller to spare and I made me a hat."
By his inborn mechanism the man had invented an oval hat, and made his hat, and the hat made his fortune. Boulton was not the man to lose so valuable a help, thus the after famous William Murdoch—the originator of locomotives and lighting by gas—look suit and services under Boulton & Watt, and in 1784 made the first vehicle propelled by steam in England, and with the very hands and brain-cunning that had produced the "timber hat."

Breaking a Chain.

"You will have to open the shop this morning, Lucia, and take care of it the best you can," called my father from the next room. "For my head is aching so that I shall be unable to leave my bed to-day."
I was quite a little girl then, not more than eleven years old, but as father and I were alone and there was no one else to perform the task, I arose cheerfully, shivered into my clothes—for it was bitter cold and quite early—and hastened down stairs.
Broom in hand for the purpose of sweeping off the side sidewalk first, I proceeded to throw open the front door, but only, to draw back, with a faint cry of terror and surprise.

Crouching behind the friendly shadow of a large packing-box, standing at one end of the doorway, was a bulky, apparently about twelve or fourteen, a port, rugged creature, with hollow cheeks and a haunted look in his dark-blue eyes that lived in my memory for many a day afterward.
"Please, please, don't cry out, or call any one!" he entreated in a low, pleading voice. "They'll surely take me again, and I don't want to go back."
"Don't want to go back where?" I asked, growing so courageous and taking a step nearer him.
For answer he pointed to a heavy ball and chain attached to one of his ankles. In those days—for the time of which I write was long ago—it was customary to attach a weight of some kind to the legs of convicts in order to prevent them from going very far in case they should attempt to escape; so I at once understood that he had broken away from the town jail.
"I was arrested for stealing a meal-pail and they treated me so bad at the jail," he said with a dry sob that went straight to my heart, "that—that—"
"You can have a poor boy! Come in, and I'll hide you safely away."
Fearing, and with some difficulty in preventing the chain from rattling which would betray his presence to my father, we succeeded in creeping down to the back cellar. There I left him, well satisfied with my morning's work.

A little while after, I carried him a bowl of steaming coffee, and a slice of bread, which he swallowed to my great satisfaction, and then he whispered, as I turned to leave, "If I had had a good strong rifle, I could get this 'ere chain off, and then I'd be all right."
"I'll bring you not only a rifle, but a good suit of clothes that belonged to my brother that's dead, and an old red wig from the garret, to disguise you with," I answered "on one condition only."
"What is it?" he asked, eyeing me curiously.
"Only this, that you give me your solemn promise never to steal again, no matter how poor or hungry you may be, and to try and become a good and respectable boy."

A flash of brightness, visible even in the dim light that filtered through the narrow collar-window, passed over his wan features, and kneeling down before me, he caught one of my hands, and bending over it, slowly breathed the required pledge.
For three days, during which time, fortunately for my project, my father kept his room, the poor fugitive remained in his dingy retreat. Then when night came on, I went back, and the one condition our town boasted was snoring comfortably between his blankets, I softly opened the back door, and let John Ray as he called himself, out into the darkness.

Freed from his fetters, and arrayed in the nice suit I had given him, he looked so respectable, even handsome, that I felt he never would be recognized, and, that he might not want for ready cash to assist him on his way I pressed a long treasured gold piece of my own in his hand, as we parted in sober silence in the shadowy doorway.

Twelve years came and went. Misfortune meanwhile had visited us in several ways.
A wintry night our little shop and all it contained, together with our household goods, was consumed by fire. Later my father's eyesight failed him, and hoping to better our condition, we moved to New York.

But we soon found out that the great city was already over-crowded with workers, and in a little while we became poorer than we had ever before.
Hearing one day that a wealthy gentleman, who was about to make a long journey, wanting a respectable person to care for his house during his absence, I hastened to apply for the situation.
I found him at his office—a handsome, kindly-looking man, seeming but a few years older than myself.
"Have you references?" he asked, on my stating my business.
I produced a written paper, which our good minister had given me before I left the home of my childhood.
A flush of pleasure overspread his handsome features as he read it.
"You do not recognize me, I see," he remarked.
I certainly did not, and said so.

"And you must remember John Ray?"

I shook my head. In the many troubles that had come upon us, the memory of the convict boy I once assisted passed entirely away.
"If you have forgotten me, Lucia Summers," he returned, taking a small shining gold-piece from his watch chain, "perhaps you may remember this, the coin you gave me one dark night twelve years ago. I had no occasion to spend it then," he went on, "for I found work almost immediately, and, since, I have kept it as a talisman against temptation and a reminder of the promise I made you."
"And why did you never let me hear from you?" I asked.
I wrote to you once, but received no reply, and two months ago, when I found myself the junior member of the firm whom I had served so long, I went to your town to look for you but you had gone no one knew whither.
John Ray, prosperous and happy, went on his intended journey, but not alone; for we were married soon after, and I accompanied him, and my father also, for the purpose of having his eyes attended to by a celebrated French doctor.
When his sight was fully restored, we came back to reside in the beautiful home which had come to us all through my timely aid in "Breaking a Chain."

A Maine Farmer and Fisherman.

It was the islander who was both farmer and fisherman, as a person uniting in himself the two most ancient and honorable professions, that aroused in Middleton the principal interest. Such a one could not take the time of two to three weeks with the seiners of the coast, and still less could he go the long voyages of the banks, to the bays of L'Escaut and Chaleurs, to Greenland and even as sometimes happens, to the coast of Iceland, for fresh balbut, where they join the fleets of Northern France, the Netherlands, and the Scandinavians. He must attend the lobster-traps, set weirs for herring, menhaden, alewives, and mackerel; keep drug notes and trawls; perhaps, if favorably located, make a specialty of supplying bait to the fleet, which, now that it must be kept cool, is often in great straits for it. Between times he runs to the shore for a day or two in his catboat, his "Hampton boat," or his "jigger." The catboat, it appeared, was the better sailer, since the more canvas in a single sail, the closer into the wind, but the Hampton boat—a modified pink stern, with slouder-of-mutton sails on its small masts—was the "abler," that is to say, better qualified to stand the exigencies of all sorts of weather. The jigger, however, a small schooner of perhaps forty feet long, with four masts, with a considerable hold, and a cabin with four bunks, a table, and a rusty sheet-iron stove for a forward, seemed the most available for general purposes, whether for taking a haul of fish, "smacking," a load of lobsters, wood, or ice, or hauling a load of apples at retail from port to port, where they were a rarity.

A professional "dragger" carried nearly a mile of net. They were strong enough to haul a net, but they were not very deep. The fish was washed in them by the gills. Thus by the regulation of the size of mesh only picked fish need be taken, while the great purse seines of the fleet take everything, destroy at every haul a value nearly equal to what is saved, and tend toward rapid extinction of the fish, as Middleton was told, besides having already reduced the average size.
The trawl was another engine of formidable havoc, against which there was equal complaint. It is the method in use among the bankers, except on George's, where the tide runs too swift for anything but lying to an anchor, and hand-lining over the side. The purse seine and the trawl were the two methods of taking the great cod, the fraser for the mackerel; the latter for all the other fish of great size. When Middleton saw a trawl, he found that it was a long cord with hundreds of baited hooks fixed at intervals along it. It was sunk so as to rest on the bottom, buoyed at both ends, and left there. A trawler kept great numbers of these lines neatly coiled in tubs and set them one after another. After a sufficient lapse of time, he went back to the first, and "undermined" it, that is drew up one end, passed it over his boat, taking off the fish, and baiting the hooks anew, and paid it out at one side as he took it in at the other. The method pursued by the bankers was to carry twelve or fourteen stories, which were put out when the fishing ground was arrived at, with two men in each, provided with tubs of trawls at discretion.

It was the sun-bleached salt-fish that was the favorite article of diet in the islanders' households, while very little account was made of the fresh. The young people had some merry customs of their own with it. They represented that if a certain particular fish was seen in the water, it was a "dread" line, were eaten before going to bed, the girl or the young man one was to marry would be indicated by appearing in a vision and handing him or her a glass of water.
Scene in a Nevada Court-Room.
Billy Brown, a lad of ten, was put on the stand and questioned.
The court—"Did you ever take an oath?"
Boy (positively)—"No, sir; I never took anything in my life."
Mr. Hines (facetiously)—"What! never?"
The spectators tittered, and the court, as mad as a hornet, called them to order, remarking: "I want mighty little of this 'Pinafore' business in my court." Just then the daughter of the court, on the floor above, was heard to disturb a piano and sing: "I'm called little Buttercup, dear little Buttercup." Another laugh followed this incident, and the court sent a constable up stairs to make the merry maiden stop her vocal and instrumental exercises.
"Shut that girl off at once," was the paring injunction from the bench.
The youthful witness was finally allowed to testify without being sworn.
"You see," he began, "I heard a racket, and went out. The woman was chuckin' bricks and cussin' like thunder, and the boys was runnin' about the yard. The night before I went down town." District Attorney—"Never mind about that."
Witness—"Well I did go down town. (I can prove it by Patsy over there.) To Patsy."—"Didn't we go down town Patsy?"
Here the room was called to order again, and the boy put off the stand.

Out of Repair—But There.

Our cow was bought from sixty miles away and appropriately enough she took steer-age passage in a steamer to get to Detroit. The wharf is about a quarter of a mile from the house and I stood there with two or three of my neighbors who had kindly offered to help me home with the cow. As the steamer rounded tow, I noticed that the cow had the whole lower deck to herself and that there were guy ropes from every tieable portion of her to stationary articles on board. The passengers on the upper deck had a pleased expectant look on their faces as if there was something enjoyable ahead. When the gateway plank was run out, the deck-hands seemed reluctant to interfere with the cow. The captain came down the forward stairs and shouted:
"Let her head line, slack up aft."
"Aye, aye, sir," cried the sailors and the command was obeyed.
"Get a line out in front."
One of the sailors took the original farm rope that was around her horns, and got on the dock. All the other lines were removed, and as the cow began to look steadily at the fellow out on the wharf, pulling on the shore he began to tremble.
"Port her a little, and send her forward," said the captain.
"Port it is, sir," answered one of the hands, as he approached the animal with a club to induce her to port. Our cow had stood like a statue all the while, glaring at the man on the wharf. Now she made one wild wave of her horns in the direction of the club person. He rapidly tumbled over two barrels, and sprang on a dry goods box while the cow stood triumphant over the club. A murmur of approbation came from the passengers, who were perched up on accessible articles of freight.
"Can I be any service?" I loudly asked the captain.
"Well, yes," said he. "If you could go and get a good serviceable corner, you would do us a favor, I think we'll need one."
Meanwhile the passengers were showing how the cow could easily be got out, but none of them came down to put their theories into practice.
"Shake your head line," called the captain to the man on the wharf. He gave the rope a couple of rapid turns around a projecting timber.
"Now hauls aft," was the next command and the boys gathered around in the rear of the cow.
"All together now," was the cry, and a dozen men gently shoved the reluctant cow shorewards, while the wharf man shortened the rope around the timber. Our cow resolutely planted her four hoofs down and hung back, but the combined force of the crew was too much for her, and she slid along amid the cheers of the passengers. Suddenly she changed her mind, and made a spring to the end of her rope. The wild grappling of the pushers as they went down with the most astonishing unanimity brought forth the heartfelt applause of the discriminating audience. By this time the captain was on the upper deck ringing the boat-bell, and

DEATH OF JUDGE CANNON.
It is our melancholy duty to announce to the people of Calhoun that Judge Larkin W. Cannon is dead. In the presence of his family and friends he breathed his last at his home in this place Monday the 4th inst. He was buried Wednesday with Masonic honors. Elsewhere appear the proceedings of a meeting of the bar and citizens, and the resolutions of the same upon his death. The space at our command this week does not admit of such a tribute to the memory of this good man as his virtues entitle him to, and we shall not attempt it this week. His consistent christian life was his own eulogy; his death will carry a pang to every true heart in our county. Next week we will have something to say of his worth as a private citizen and public man.

In our next paper we will doubtless be able to give our readers the result of the elections in Indiana and Ohio. On those two elections hang the fate of the two great parties in the Presidential contest of November.

We return thanks to Mr. J. L. Green for a sack of the largest sweet potatoes we have ever seen. One of them weighed five and a half pounds.

By letter from our friend A. O. Stewart, we learn that he and Mr. Sharpe of this county have bought out the elegant livery establishment of Capt. Whitley in Rome, Ga., and are now engaged in that business of course they will make a success of it. The world does not hold two cleverer or more deserving gentlemen. We hope everybody who visits Rome from this section will patronize them.

Mr. Wallace W. Woodward has returned from Texas much improved in health.

We only learned this week of the death of Mrs. Turner, wife of Rev. D. B. Turner, of this county.

She was a most estimable lady in every relation of life, and the news of her death will be sad intelligence to a large circle of friends in this county. The aged and respected husband of the deceased lady will have the sympathy of all who hear of his sad bereavement.

The Radicals are crowding over small gains in the town elections of Connecticut. The issues involved were entirely of a local nature and the election has no significant whatever as bearing on the Presidential election.

Judge Whitlock is presiding at the present term of the Court with that dignity, fairness and courtesy that has ever characterized him. This is the last Court for six years, over which Judge Whitlock will preside in Calhoun. In taking leave of him we desire to say that he has a warm place in the hearts of our people, who have ever recognized in him an incorruptible Judge, and a man of warm heart and generous impulses. In the recent election he condemned his attitude as an Independent candidate more than his administration as a Judge. Few men could hold the office so long as Judge Whitlock has (12 years) and go out with his eminence unscathed as his.

Parties in this portion of Calhoun who own vehicles in need of paint are hereby informed that Mr. L. A. Weaver has procured for a short time the services of Mr. C. A. Arnold, probably the finest buggy and coach painter in the South.

Mr. Allen learned his business in one of the largest coach painting establishments in the South, and the character of work he is turning out attests that he learned it well. He is the only painter we have known in the South who can give a buggy that finish and polish that belongs to work from the Northern manufacturers. While his work is good, his prices are moderate. Remember that, according to the German proverb, "paint costs nothing," and while you have such an opportunity preserve your vehicles by giving them a protective coat of paint.

MARRIED.—Sept. 30th by Rev. Anson West, Miss Annie Camp and Mr. J. A. Thornton, both of Talladega county.

Mr. Thornton is a son of Judge Thornton of Talladega, and we learn, a most excellent gentleman. Surely he should be such to deserve so fair and gentle a bride as he has won. Through, let us hope, a long life, we will follow them with warmest wishes for their happiness and prosperity.

We have been compelled for want of room to boil the Cross Plains' items down to the above.—Ed. REPUBLICAN.

SEMA, ALA., Oct. 4th 1880.
DEAR SIR:
Will you allow me the favor to make known to my friends in Calhoun county, that my little daughter seven years old, over twelve months ago swallowed a large well matured watermelon seed which lodged in her wind-pipe and has been resting on her lungs ever since.
The child was reduced to a mere skeleton. Finally I summed up courage to have an operation performed on her throat. I carried the child to Dr. C. J. Clark of Selma to have him operate on her throat and to treat her. On last Saturday Dr. Clark assisted by Drs. Riggs, Johnson and Furness performed the very delicate and difficult operation. Dr. Clark opened the windpipe with his several instruments and extracted from the lungs the watermelon seed. It was restored to its natural position, put soft or sprouted. I have the seed to show to anyone. Language is meagre and poor to express my gratification, and also my lasting gratitude to Dr. Clark and his assistants. The operation was most skillfully performed. Chloroform was used and the child did not seem to be conscious of what was going on. In efforts to much pleasure to say the child is doing well. The cut in the neck and windpipe is closed up. I will leave for home next Wednesday with the child.
Truly Yours,
JOHN M. PATTERSON

Proceedings of a Meeting of the Bar and People.
At a meeting of the Bar and citizens of Calhoun County, held at the Court House in Jacksonville Ala., on the 6th of Oct., for the purpose of paying tribute to the memory of Hon. L. W. Cannon deceased, late Judge of the Probate Court of this county, Col. James Crook announced the object of the meeting and called Hon. G. C. Ellis to preside, and Jno. M. Caldwell Esq., to the Secretary's chair.

The following preamble and resolutions were offered by Hon. Jno. H. Caldwell:

Resolved, that in the death of Larkin W. Cannon the country has lost a Judge who has worn the ermine unsullied, and whose record is without spot or blemish; society has lost a member whose private virtues are worthy of emulation; the church, a follower, whose christian virtues partook of the inspiration of the Master; his family an affectionate father and a tender loving husband.

Resolved, that we tender his bereaved family our heartfelt condolence, and, as a further evidence of our great esteem for our friend, we ask His Honor W. L. Whitlock to adjourn the Circuit Court at half past nine o'clock to-morrow morning Oct. 6th, to attend the burial services of the deceased, and that he permit the foregoing preamble and resolutions to be spread upon the minutes of his Court.

Touching and eloquent tributes were then paid to the many virtues and good qualities that characterized the deceased, by John T. Martin Esq., Hon. Wm. M. Hames, Hon. John H. Caldwell and H. L. Stevenson Esq. The resolutions were then adopted.

Upon motion a committee consisting of Hon. John H. Caldwell, Capt. J. H. Savage and Joe A. Walden Esq., were appointed to notify the Hon. Wm. L. Whitlock Judge of the Circuit Court, of the action of this meeting and request the adjournment of his Court until 9 o'clock P. M. as a mark of respect to Judge Cannon. The Court was ordered to be adjourned.

The resolutions were requested to publish the proceedings of this meeting, and a copy was ordered to be furnished the family of the deceased. Meeting adjourned.

IT COMES AT LAST.
The Greatest Compliment to the Greatest Show.
We never look to editor-in-chiefs, upon the gravity and weighty page of the paper which they edit, for ardent criticism. Last of all would we have sought for such recognition from such a source in the Louisville Courier-Journal, and from the pen of its great editor. But when it comes to a really good circus, Mr. Waterson, like the rest of us, is very human, and we like him the better that he is so, and is not ashamed to acknowledge it in a hearty and manly way. He visited Sells Brothers' Millionaire Confederation of Stupendous Railroad Shows, at Louisville, on September 4th, and here is what he was delighted to editorially say of it, after the city editor in his department had exhausted his vocabulary of praise:
"The attendance at the two afternoon and two night exhibitions of Sells Brothers' Millionaire Confederation of Stupendous Railroad Shows was so remarkable as to be entitled to a special mention. Not less than five to eight thousand persons were present at each performance. The perfectness of the arrangements and the admirable order preserved at the attendance. The show is a first-class one, and although the managers make large promises, they abundantly fulfill them. The entertainments gave thorough satisfaction. The circus starts to-morrow on its tour through Kentucky and Tennessee, and the readers of the Courier-Journal in the places it visits will have the opportunity of seeing the best and most complete show in the world."

Such an unusual and extraordinary compliment, from so unexpected and eminently reliable a source, carries with it a weight, the effect of which will be evinced at Oxford Oct. 10th when the great show so signally honored comes among us.

INTERESTING TO FARMERS.
The Best Hillside Plow, Walking Cultivator and Single Plow ever invented.
The undersigned procured the 10th day of Aug. 1879 on the above named agricultural implements, and since their manufacture began they have been thoroughly tested and in every instance have given entire satisfaction.
They are made of wrought iron and any blacksmith can repair one. The hillside plow is acknowledged to be the best of the market, doing its work to perfection. The walking cultivator carries eleven plows of different kinds, two at a time, and cultivates cotton at one furrow to the row. It subsoils admirably. In short one man and horse can do the work of two with it, and do it better than with a single plow. I claim for the single plow that the iron stock can be put up cheaper than the wooden stock, and it wears for double time.

IN THE LONG RUN.

This old-fashioned saying
So slightly expressed
And carefully uttered,
Is one of the best.
Oh powder, young tridler,
With young life begun,
The deep, earnest meaning Of "in the long run."

For "in the long run" boys,
The seed will spring up
That was sown in the garden
Or dropped in the cup.
And, remember! no roses
Will spring from the weed,
And no beautiful fruit
From an unworthy seed.

How many a stripling
In trouble to-day
By vicious living
With comrades so gay;
With character shipwrecked
And duties undone,
Will be sorrowful harvesting
"In the long run."

And "in the long run,"
The toiler fares best
Who performs honest labor And takes honest rest.
Who, contented and happy,
Hasten not, in a day,
Or a year, to reap riches
That will pass away.

The good and the evil
That abide on the earth
The joy and the sorrow,
The pain and the mirth,
The battles unended,
The victories won,
Will yield what was sown, ladies,
"In the long run."

The Fatal Quarrel.

"But I say you shall not!"
"And I say I will!"
The speakers were husband and wife.
The former leaning on the mantel-piece, and frowned angrily, looking down at the latter as he spoke. The wife, still sitting by the tea table, for the meal had just been finished, did not glance up as she answered, but went on talking to her lap dog in terms of fond endearment, and feeding it with sugar.

Yes, they were husband and wife. Seven years before, Carrie Dayton, just eighteen, freshly freed from the trammels of boarding-school, had launched forth into society, with a head full of romantic ideas of love and marriage. There she had met with Harry Aymer. To her he seemed almost a god—so far superior to all others, that very speedily she found herself thinking more of him than of any other admirer, and listening with beating pulse to his many tones.

He was verging towards his thirtieth year, and was already somewhat world worn; for, being wealthy, he had not been confined to the dull routine of a business life, but had roamed the world at large, traveling in all lands, tasting every cup of pleasure; but he was still very handsome, and his manners in society were perfect. Men had envied him—women had loved him—and this man had grown weary of it all.

But under the proud, cold smile was hidden a warm heart, somewhat crusted over with selfishness, it is true, but it was there.
And when he met Caroline Dayton, he felt that he had encountered his fate. To him there was something irresistible in her bright freshness and beauty, and in the winning gaiety of her artless manners. Then the polished marble of her fair skin, the golden curls that fell around her shoulders, the bright blue eyes, full of light—these all possessed rare attractions for this man, whose heart had been so long untouched.

Day after day had found him at her side, putting forth every effort to make himself agreeable. So, after a few months, they were married, and went forth to tread life's journey together. They traveled for a while, and the young bride, delighted with the new scenes opened up before her, was hardly conscious of the fact that his will not her wish, guided and controlled all her movements. It was very sweet to obey one whom she loved so fondly. At last they settled in a home of their own, replete with every comfort and luxury—and life began in earnest.

Now came the crisis: From early childhood, Harry Aymer had shown himself possessed with an iron will, stern and unyielding. Carrie, too, had a will of her own. For the first few months of their marriage it was very pleasant for her to have him will for her—and gracefully she yielded; but at length the reins were drawn too tight, the intense selfishness of the husband became apparent even to Carrie—and there began to grow up a spirit of rebellion on her part, a desire to judge for herself sometimes, and act accordingly.

Matters grew from bad to worse. This opposition of wills, occurring only at long intervals at first, became frequent at last;
both regretting it in cooler moments, yet neither confessing it to the other; he thinking she ought to trust his judgement entirely; she carrying over in her heart a sense of injustice due her.

Those pleasant little courtesies, which serve to keep love burning brightly on the domestic altar, were by degrees utterly neglected, and the lamp of love grew dim.
After the lapse of some three years, a beautiful babe lay on the mother's bosom, a bright, wet flower, with its amber rings of hair, its pure white skin, and heavenly blue eyes—a very miniature of the mother who bore it. Reconciliation ensued, not spoken, but tacitly agreed upon. Husband and wife seemed drawn together by the little golden link, and while the little angel gladdened their home, happiness remaind.

But a bitter time came, which should have served to unite those severed hearts more closely. The child sickened and died. When the stricken parents bowed over their dead, each mentally resolved to be all in all to each other, that no shadow should come between them; but the lips spoke not of the resolve made in their own strength—pride kept them silent.

As the months passed on, the old spirit revived in each, and now, after a few years of wedded life, he told the pair whom "God had joined together," living in almost constant enmity—each heart hardened and cold, never a loving word or caress, only silence or upbraiding.

So matters stood at the time our story opened. The handsome room, with its rich furniture looked very inviting. Nothing was lacking that taste could desire, or wealth supply. But the light from the glowing fire, fell upon the fair face of the wife, where discontent lay like a dark shadow, while the red lips curled in apparent contempt or indifference. A heavy frown darkened the husband's brow: the firm set of the lips, and the curve of the dilated nostril, showed his excessive anger.

Mr. and Mrs. Aymer had been asked to an evening party, and both had expected to go. But the husband had come home out of humor which he proceeded to vent on his wife, concluding by saying that he should not go to the party.

Mrs. Aymer, vexed at his manner even more than at his words, had replied tartly that she should go without him.

"The invitation has been accepted; we have no good reasons for staying away; and I, for one, intend to go."

"But I say you shall not!" said the husband, pushing his chair angrily back from the tea-table, standing up, taking a turn across the floor, and then going to the mantle piece, where he stood, as we have described, looking gloomily down at his wife.

"And I say I will!" was the retort, as the speaker, turned away from the table, but retained her seat, and began to fondle her lap-dog.

This was too much for the husband.
The cool indifference cut him to the heart.
With a smothered oath he flung himself out of the room, put on his hat in the hall, and went off to his club.

When the outer door was heard banging after him, Mrs. Aymer rose from her chair, an angry light in her eye.

"Now I half meant it," she said; "but now I will go. If he had only asked me to remain kindly: if he had said to me, even ill or tired; if he had smiled at me, I would have stayed at home. But I will not be ordered."

Never had she dressed with more care.
Never had she looked more beautiful than when she entered her carriage to go to the ball.

After a couple of hours the husband came home, for by this time his anger was over and he felt rather ashamed of himself.
His rage returned, however, when he found that Mrs. Aymer had really gone, for he had persuaded himself that, after all,
she would remain.

"How dare she defy me thus?" he cried, angrily.

But after awhile, came calmer thoughts.
His mind began to wander over past years.
He dreamed of the bright maiden he had wooed so perseveringly, and who came to him in all her young beauty. The stern face softened as the sweet vision came up before him. He thought of the golden head that had nestled on his breast, of the blue eyes that had brightened at his approach, of the warm kisses that had melted away the ice that had crusted around his heart. He remembered how submissive she had been until he had driven her to rebellion by his exacting selfishness. Then came to him the memory of their child, and of the happy hours they had spent watching its unfolding beauties. His heart yearned for the mother of his babe. Memory, with her busy fingers, had unlocked the chambers of his heart, and her softening influence was doing its work.

He began to see at last how he had wronged and injured the wife he should have cherished. He sprang from his seat, and walked rapidly to and fro.

"This shall be no longer!" he cried.
"I will beg her forgiveness. I will win back my darling's love. She shall be on my heart, as in the olden times."

The hour grew late, and he began to wonder why she did not return. Opening the door he looked into the deserted street.
A strange dread stole over him, for nearer and nearer came the sound of wheels driven rapidly. Hastening down, as the carriage reached the door, he was confronted by a man who sprang out, exclaiming breathlessly:

"Mr. Aymer, if you would see your wife alive, come with me!"

And forcing the terror-stricken husband into the vehicle, they were hurried away.

Returning from the party, Caroline Ay-mer sat alone in her carriage, not thinking of the gay scene she had left, but of her unhappy married life. She was taking to herself much blame that she had not been more submissive and more forbearing, and wondering if it were too late to undo the evil. Tender thoughts of the domestic so dear were stealing into her heart. Suddenly there came the sound of men running;
the cry of "Fire!" the whirr of the engine, the roar and plunge of horses; the ineffectual efforts of the driver to control them; then she was thrown violently forward, and all was darkness.

When the repentant husband reached the side of his wife, death had sealed her eyes.
Some one had lifted her fair form, and borne it into the nearest house, but medical aid was useless—the vital spark had fled. The injury was internal, and not a demish broke the pure white surface of her marble face.
Caroline Aymer never looked lovelier than now, when she lay there in her gala robes. Her dress of pale blue silk with its first-work of lace and pearls, only made more pallid the round form, lately so full of life and health. She had passed away without pain, and very placid was the sweet face, fast growing cold in death.

Words cannot picture this strong man's agony. He flung himself beside the body, and his voice grew hoarse with pleading for one more look, one single word of forgiveness. Alas! none came.

Years afterwards, a grave was dug by strange hands in a far distant land. None there knew that the truly, broken-hearted man, whose last resting-place it was, had, when alive, borne the name of Harry Ay-mer, and had spent his days ever since that fatal night, in vain remorse for that fatal quarrel.

Feathers of a Bird.

Of a feather's lightness we may form some idea when we find that the largest quill of a golden eagle weighs only sixty-five grains, and that seven such quills do not weigh more than a copper penny-piece; that the feathers of a common fowl, which weighs thirty-seven ounces, weigh only of an owl weighs only, some for covering and some for strength, we shall find them, on examination, very differently put together. The light downy part, when examined through a microscope, will be found to bear little resemblance to the flat part or blade of the quill. If it were not so, a bird would scarcely be able to fly at all, for when the flat of the wing was pressed down, the air would pass through it, and yield no resistance. The fibres of the downy part, we see, have little connection with each other; they have short and loose side shoots, just sufficient to mat them together when pressed close to the skin; whereas, the side shoots of the quill-feather hook and grapple with one another, so as to make one firm and united surface. But others there are, much stronger and stiffer than the wing quill feathers; as those, for instance, forming the tails of the wood-pecker tribe. And the reason would be evident to any person who watched a woodpecker on the stem of a tree feeding. Its food consists of grubs, usually concealed in the wood. In order to get them, he must first remain fixed on the bark, and make a hole with his beak, a tedious, if not impracticable operation, for he is not for the wily success of the tail feathers, which press against a tree and act like an additional limb. The tail, however, has another use, applicable more to birds in flight; it is to them what a rudder is to a boat, and in many cases acts like a third wing. If we look at a hawk hovering in the air, when he remains in one spot we shall see that the tail is spread out like a fan, and it is in a constant state of quivering motion, balancing the bird, while the wings are keeping it aloft. It is clear that if water could sink into the soft feathery covering of a bird, every shower of rain would be the death of thousands, inasmuch as it would increase their weight considerably, and, at the same time, by destroying the fine elastic nature of their feathers, entirely disenable them from flying, and they must remain in a helpless state upon the ground, either to perish from hunger, or become the prey to men-or animals, who would catch them without trouble. But against such a possibility they are guarded by an abundant oily covering, which is constantly renewed; so that the rain, instead of sinking in, runs off, without remaining an instant; and we all know that if we take up a duck, or any swimming bird, we shall find, though it might have been diving just before, that it is perfectly dry, and free from all damp.
But this principle of life, if it may be so called, in a feather ceases with the life of the bird; for if we were to throw a dead duck into the water, we should find that its coat had lost all power of resisting water, and becomes a spongy mass of moisture. The growth of feathers in young birds in hot and favorable weather is very remarkable. It has been ascertained that the feathers of a young bird, after it has been hatched, require eight days to appear after their appearing from the egg in a helpless, naked state, they have acquired the first part of their feathers.

The Toilet of the Fly.

The toilet of the fly is as carefully attended to as that of the most frivolous of human insects. With a contempt for the lookingglass—an article which he reserves for the most ignoble uses—he brushes himself up and waddles his little round head, erect full of vanity, wherever he is disposed to show himself. After a long day of dissipation and flitting with his six small legs, and little round body all soiled with sirup and butter and cream, he passes out of the dining-room and wings his way to the clean white eord along which the morning-glories climb, and in this retired spot, heedless of the crafty spider that is practicing gymnastics a few feet above him, he proceeds to purify and sweeten himself for the refreshing repose of a soft dream of the balmy summer night, so necessary to one who is expected to be early at breakfast. It is a wonderful toilet. Retaining himself on his front and middle legs, he throws his hind legs rapidly over his body, binding down his frail wings for an instant with the pressure, then raking them over with a backward motion, which he repeats until they are bright and clean. Then he pushes the two legs along his body under the thorough currying, every now and then throwing the legs out and rubbing them together to remove what he has collected from his corporeal surface. Next he goes to work upon his van. Raising his two forelegs and middle legs, he keeps his two forelegs and begins a vigorous scrubbing of his head and shoulders, using his proboscis every little while to push the accumulation from his limbs. At times he is energetic that it seems as if he were trying to pull his head off, but no fly ever committed suicide. Some of his motions very much resemble those of pussy at her toilet. It is plain, even to the naked eye, that he does every little thing for a purpose, and his fished he looks like a new fly, so clean and bright. The white cord is defiled, but Floppy is himself again, and he bids the morning-glories a very good evening.

The man who exploded with laughter probably didn't know it was loaded.

A Flower Farm in England.

In a corner of the County of Essex, England, the Messrs. Carter, renowned throughout Great Britain and her dependencies as floriculturists, have established a farm devoted to the growth of flowers. These plants are not destined to adorn the gardens of the wealthier classes, but to furnish seed from which flowers may be uniformly obtained. A recent visit to the village of St. Oystin, pronounced by its inhabitants "Toosey," discloses a tract of well-sheltered country, which, in its variety of colors, reminded one of a stained-glass window gone mad. In one place an expanse of the deepest blue is formed by a few acres of Neomophila insignis. Next to it appears a perfect sea of the purple sagebrush. Then comes a flash of the deep-blue lobelia, and further on one enters a space covered with the Yucca red of the Phlox Drummondii. These are followed by smaller beds of sweet william, the yellow oxalis, the pink euclidium, the purple leucanthemum, and these masses of color are relieved by the white nemophila.

Another portion of the farm is devoted to petals, with purple and white leaves spotted with green; these are followed by a yellow sea of Eschscholzia crocea, and then comes a promontory of the odoriferous sweet sultan, white lilac and yellow.
At the end of this appears an island of verbenas, surrounded by the blue lupin. A sea of the bright scarlet godita, named after the princess of Wales, and another pond of the same color is formed by the Geranium carolinianum. Every color is found here; the blue of the Loebelia speciosa, the pale blue of the campanula, the yellow of the snapdragon, the rosy tint of the sweet-pea, the deep orange of the Eschscholzia mandarin, the bright scarlet of the Tom Thum nasturtium, the old-fashioned Virginia stock, the French gray and purple colored G. d. d. d. d., the white Clarkia, dedicated to Mrs.
Langtry, whilst Lord Beaconsfield and Mr. Gladstone's names are immortalized in different kinds of chrysanthemums.
These flowers are not picked, but are allowed to run to seed, which is carefully gathered and sent to headquarters, where it is made up into small packages, labelled and sent out to their customers. One corner of the farm is devoted to the cultivation of the seed of less ornamental but more useful products. Here one may find a bed of American parsley; and a plot of the new mammoth wheat lately introduced from the States is regarded with especial interest. This cereal produces an ear of immense size, but bearded like barley.
These "horus," as the bear is called, drop off as the ear ripens, leaving it perfectly smooth. The straw, too, is long and vigorous and promises well for thrashing purposes and as bedding for animals. Next to the extirpation of weeds, the gardener's greatest difficulty is to keep the different kinds of flowers in their own beds. The small birds, on the other hand, do their best to mix them up and seem to take a special delight in carrying the seed of some bright scarlet flower and dropping it into the midst of a bed devoted to a flower of another color, when next year it will appear in all its pristine beauty, only to be ruthlessly eradicated by the hand of those specially deputed to search for such intruders.

Mount Etna Still Active.

Professor Silvestri, of Catania, reports that since the shower of ashes on July 15, Etna has shown various signs of activity.
The latest manifestation is a phase of mud eruptions at Palermo, on the southeast of the mountain. Two craters have been violently ejecting abundant torrents of mud, more consistent than usual, and of a higher temperature (140 degrees Fahrheit). This mud, accumulating in the basins in large masses, finally broke through all barriers, overflowed and destroyed the adjoining fields, and buried several mills and farmhouses. In this eruption there was an abundant development and pressure of gaseous matter, of such force that it produced oscillations strong enough to tear up the old lava, forming rents out of which the gas rushed with the noise of a boiling kettle, and still continues with increased intensity, seen from Catania in the shape of dense clouds covering the whole summit of Etna in a clear sky. Changes have also taken place which have entirely altered the form of the central crater. The old ravine, which formerly crossed the crater, and made two-thirds of it into an ample and easily accessible basin, a natural laboratory for the study of the products of the volcano, now exists no longer. The central crater, from the effects of violent commotions, has crumbled, and with part of its sides and the high point whence it was formerly possible to enjoy the sunrise, has been precipitated into the ravine, diminishing the height of the mountain by about 40 feet, while the circumfer-ence of the crater has become wider by half a kilometre. The general destruction of a crater has in a certain way rejuven-ated the crater, which has regained its characteristic form of a funnel, at the bottom of which is now the eruptive mouth.

Burmese Umbrellas.

In Siam and Burmah, China, Annam, and Cochina China, the umbrella is not only a necessary protection against the intrusive rays of a vertical sun, but it has functions of its own, to discharge, which are quite foreign to those of the umbrella as we know it. It was, intended to be, a "little shade." It is a distinctive feature in the lives and characters of the natives of those parts, and their kings and emperors, when writing to one another, allude to their subjects as "wearers of the umbrella" in contrast to the ignorant and confused people of other climes. Gold and silver umbrellas, which in the Provinces may be carried by anybody, are reserved in the capital for princes of the blood alone, and red umbrellas are a tested by the gay sparks of Burmah society as being the next thing most gaudy in appearance.
Etiquette has also fixed the exact number of umbrellas that Burmah nobles may display when they approach the "lord of the golden palace."

TEXTS FOR PATRIOTS.

The following patriotic texts are from the writings of Gen. Hancock, the Democratic candidate for President.

The bayonet is not a fit instrument for collecting the votes of freemen.

The principles of American liberty still are the lawful inheritance of the people, and ever should be.

Power may destroy the form, but not the principles of justice; these will live in spite even of the sword.

It is a vital principle in our system that neither fraud nor force must be allowed to subvert the rights of the people.

The army should have nothing to do with the selection and inauguration of presidents. The people elect the president.

I would under no circumstances, allow myself or troops to determine who were the lawful members of a State legislature.

The regular army should be so directed by its superior officers as to be a bulwark in support of the rights of the people and of the law.

We want no army whenever it shall come to pass that the power of the magistrate—civil or military—is permitted to deal with the mere opinions or feelings of the people.

No form of government, however carefully devised, no principles, however sound, will protect the rights of the people unless the administration is faithful and efficient.

The right of trial by jury, the habeas corpus, the liberty of the press, the freedom of speech, the natural rights of persons and the rights of property must be preserved.

The people elect the President. The Congress declare who he is. We of the army have only to obey its mandates and are protected in so doing only as far as they may be lawful.

The army has been used unlawfully at times in the judgment of the people, and we have lost a great deal of kindly feeling which the community at large once felt for us. It is time to stop and unload.

It is only by a full vote, free ballot and fair count that the people can rule in fact, as required by the theory of our government. Take this foundation away and the whole structure falls.

In war it is indispensable to repel force with force and overthrow and destroy opposition to lawful authority. But when the insurrectionary forces have been overthrown and peace established, and the civil authorities are ready and willing to perform their duties, the military should cease to lead, and the civil administration resume its natural and rightful dominion.

DE GOLYER GARFIELD.

The Republican candidate for President has long borne the sobriquet of DeGolyer Garfield. He obtained it in this way:
When the District of Columbia was ruled by Grant's Governor, known as Boss Shepherd, in those days when our Alabama carpet-bagger, Spencer, was Chairman of the Senate District Committee, money was squandered right and left by the profligate adventurers who fattened upon the national Treasury. Shepherd awarded to a Chicago man, Parsons, paid Garfield $5,000 as his share of services rendered during the Shepherd ring in getting an appropriation from Congress in aid of the DeGolyer and other contracts. Garfield was then a member of Congress and a recognized leader of his party, and it was the Congress of which he was a member that voted not only this immense sum to DeGolyer, but other appropriations amounting to three or four half millions for the contracts entered into by Boss Shepherd. Parsons was an intimate friend of Garfield. He was marshal of the Supreme Court, and his rooms were the headquarters of the corrupt lobby. Garfield was the most active supporter of this lobby. It is in evidence that he got $5,000 of the plunder. How much more of it he got may never be known. And this man now claims to be a reformer, and seeks the franchise of an honest people as a candidate for the Presidency!

REPUBLICAN PORTRAITS OF GENERAL GARFIELD.

The Tribune and the Times of New York, are now supporting General Garfield for President, and endeavoring to push the Credit Mobilier and De Golyer fraud, into the background. In the meantime will honest, intelligent voters read what these papers have to say after the Poland Committee report?

On Feb. 19, 1873, the day after the report of the Poland committee, the Times said, in an editorial article:

"Of those who are now members and who purchased Credit Mobilier stock, the committee says that had it been proven that they knew the character of the stock they bought, their act would have been a corrupt one, and they would have been deserving of severe condemnation by the House of Representatives." Their participation in the Credit Mobilier fraud is a most distressing figure. Their participation in the most unfortunate contradictions of testimony, which the committee do not undertake to unravel. The only possible comment on their cases is, that they had taken a perfectly upright course in the matter, and refused to have anything to do with the stock, no occasion for contradiction could have arisen.

"We agree with the committee that a knowledge of the relation of the Credit Mobilier to the Union Pacific Railway would have made the holding of that stock by a member of Congress a dishonorable act."

"We do not agree with the committee in its lenient assumption that such knowledge was not possessed by the Congressmen who purchased the stock. If they did not know its character, they must have been curiously deaf and blind to what was going on about them.

On the next day, Feb. 20, the Times continued its arraignment of the Republican committee which had failed to visit censure on the Congressmen who had been bribed, and it paid special attention to the cases of those who, like Kelley and Garfield, had been published as perjurers by the committee's report:

"The Poland committee does not meet it (the real question) at all satisfactorily. It says that there is no evidence that the Congressmen knew of the nature of the stock. This is begging the question.
Congressmen ought to have known of the nature of the stock before investing in it. It was their business to inform themselves, and they could very easily have done so. The source of its profits are very well known at the time Congressmen bought it. Though Oakes Ames may have succeeded in concealing his own motive, which was to bribe Congressmen, their acceptance of the stock was not on that account innocent. The dishonor of the act, as a participation in an obvious fraud, still remains.

The committee errs gravely in not

Roll of Honor.
The following parties have paid in full their subscription to the Roll of Honor of the Republican within the last few days.
O. E. Ury, A. S. Vestal, Saml. Noble, J. M. Whiteside, Theo. Kelley, R. J. Angel.
We are indebted to Mr. [Name] for a fine lot of fish last Wednesday.
We do not complain at our present roll of honor is not near as long as we would like to see it every week. We will send some of our subscribers that are near town send us in some wood or other thing that will be acceptable to us. Friends, make a rush for the Roll of Honor.
Fine Apples.
We are indebted to our old and true friend, J. W. Bradley, for a lot of the finest apples we have seen this season. They are the Shockley variety, and are the best winter keepers we have grown. This is a substantial token of appreciation that goes right to our hearts.
The following was received too late for publication last week.
LADIGA ITEMS.
We have plenty of rain to-day and night of cotton in the field to pick. Cotton crop is better this year than was expected. Corn crop good also.
We have a hard time in this part of the Ladiga Vineyard. Our citizens are being accused of making and selling whisky, I think, and that is the opinion of citizens throughout our neighborhood. Mr. Editor, what ought to be done of a man that will swear a witness? Will the devil have him or no? I believe that he will. If he does him he ought to burn him eternal. If he does not he will not give him hell.
W. H. CROFT.
Millinery.
The undersigned has recently received a choice lot of Millinery Goods of the LATEST STYLES.
She will sell, trimmed or untrimmed, reasonable prices. Also a select lot of Ribbons, Notions, etc.
MRS. EMMA C. KING.
Jacksonville, Ala.
CROSS PLAINS ITEMS.
Cotton continues to pour in from all parts of the country. Some days we receive once or twice a day. Our depot platform will have to be enlarged as it is now too small by half. Cotton this week, 10c 10j.
Our community was greatly shocked at Monday on hearing of the very sudden death of Mr. S. D. Johnson, one of our oldest and useful citizens. The sad and unexpected event occurred at home on the night of the 17th inst. Mr. Johnson left home that evening, in his usual health, on his way to Atlanta to buy goods, stopped overnight at Rome, and retired about ten o'clock, having conversed pleasantly with two or three gentlemen. Not appearing the next morning at breakfast, a servant was sent to his room to awake him, when the discovery was made that he was dead. His remains were brought here Tuesday and interred in the cemetery at this place. A large procession of sorrowing friends following to their resting place. Truly a good citizen and an upright man is gone. We tender the bereaved relatives our sympathy and condolence.
Several of our citizens have gone to the Atlanta fair. We hope they may have a good time.
We notice considerable property is changing hands here now, which indicates that our place is improving. We greatly need more dwelling houses; this thing is operating against our growth as a town. We hope some of our enterprising citizens will build a few good comfortable tenement houses soon.
REPORTER.
OAK LEVY, ALA.,
Oct. 18-1890.
Allow me to state to the annual Convention of the Y. M. C. A. for the North East Ala., commenced at the Chapel of Calhoun County on Friday at 7 P. M. St. Inst. Robt. C. Johnson of White Plains, President presiding.
The following delegates were present: White Plains, John Watson, J. M. LeGrand and Hugh Napper. Bethel, John Carroll. Howell's Chapel, Thos. A. Howell, J. T. Parker, D. W. Gray, H. P. Davidson, H. L. Earp, B. P. and John Stead.
Opened with religious services by the President, after which he delivered his annual address, which was timely and appropriate and in a marked degree devotional the spirit of the Master.
Devotional exercises were continued until some length to the interest and edification of the entire audience.
Adjourned till Saturday 9 A. M.
The Convention met Saturday pursuant to adjournment, Robt. C. Johnson in the chair. The following additional delegates were present from Bethel, W. C. Smith, Archie Smith, Benj. Bridges and J. M. Redden.
Prayer meeting conducted by U. L. At 11 o'clock the Bible reading exercises were conducted by the President, in which quite a number participated. The most prominent proposition tion of which was the Reconciliation of the world to God through Jesus Christ.

On motion, at one P. M. the Convention adjourned till 3 P. M. at which time a business meeting was held and several committees were appointed to visit destitute neighborhoods and hold prayer meetings, and if practicable, organize associations.
J. A. Howell, W. J. Smith, Harris Graham, J. M. LeGrand and D. W. Gray were appointed a committee to visit Esom Hill and present minutes of the Association and organize in that neighborhood.
Reports from the different Associations were made by the delegates which in some instances were quite encouraging, especially that of Bethel which reported a membership of about 60, and an average attendance at their weekly meetings about 30. Prominence was given at this hour to the subject of family religion and family prayers.
Bethel was chosen as the place to hold the next annual Convention.
Prayer meeting at night conducted by J. M. LeGrand.
Sunday 9 A. M. Sunday School recitation by the Convention and the Sunday School of Howell's Chapel. At 11 o'clock one hour and a half were spent in discussing the topic of "How can young men aid the church and contribute most to the religious growth and development of the community."
At 3 p. m. an address to the irreligious was made by W. J. Smith and others.
At 7 o'clock a Gospel meeting was held in which quite a number of young men participated.
Closed with the benediction by Rev. W. G. Howell.
From the indications good was accomplished and every one went to their homes with their purposes to work for the Master greatly strengthened.
ATLANTA, GA., Oct. 20.
The special attraction of the Soldiers Reunion to-day was a sham battle which took place between visiting and local military at Oglethorpe Park, and was witnessed by 25,000. Two battalions took part in the battle—one representing the British, Capt. Burke of the Gate City Guards commanding; and the others, Americans, commanded by Capt. Duchesney, of Cadets. The Sherman Cadets, the Atlanta Grays, Richard Volunteers of Columbia, S. C., Rockford Rifles of Ill., and a battery of the Fifth United States Artillery made up the British Army; while the American Army was composed of the Gate City Guards, Sherman Cadets, Jacksonville Guards and Mobile Rifles.
The battle lasted about twenty minutes, and both armies were well handled. Each man fired twelve rounds. The battle resulted in a victory for the Americans, who captured the British army. It was intensely exciting and was thoroughly enjoyed by the vast crowd. To-morrow an old fashioned Georgia barbecue will be given to the visiting military at the encampment. The Mystic Crew gave their annual parade to-night. The streets were thronged with citizens and visitors.
DENVER, COLO., Oct. 17.
A conflict with the Utes now seems imminent. Two companies of soldiers left Jackson City Friday morning for the reservation, to arrest Agent Berry and others on a writ issued by the District Attorney for Gunnison County, under orders from the Government. Should those troops go off the reservation after the prisoners, there is great danger that war will ensue. Gov. Pitkin, who was not consulted about sending troops, expresses the opinion that the number of men is not adequate to cope with the Indians, and twice as many should have been sent.
COUNCIL BLUFF, IA., Oct. 18.
The snow and wind storm which swept over the West on Friday and Saturday was very severe in this neighborhood. Snow fell throughout Friday night, and to-day the roads are frozen solid. The train on the Southwestern railroad was blocked at Missouri valley by drifts of snow to seven feet deep. All along Sioux City, railroad sheets of ice and snow are reported three or four inches thick. Trains from St. Paul and Yankton due Saturday have not yet arrived.
St. Paul, Oct. 18.
The storm has not been very severe here, but it is reported that snow along the Northern Pacific railroad is deeper than at any time last winter.
DENVER, COLO., Oct. 18.
A telegram to Gov. Pitkin says: "Indian Agents Berry, Hoyt, Kline and Meacham are all now in jail at Gunnison City, charged with the murder of Jackson, the freighter."
MAURIED.—In Chillicothe, Sept. 12, Herbert R. Rollings and Emma J. Moss. Thus, does one familiar proverb receive a death blow.—New Haven Register.
HAYT & COTHRAN, Rome, Ga., sell strictly pure White Lead, Paints, Oils, Colors and Varnishes as low as any house in the trade. They drive their business.

A CARD.
About three years ago we were requested by some of our employees to purchase sewing machines for them. After a careful examination of all the leading machines we were convinced that the "White" was the best sewing machine manufactured, and we bought six. These instantly created a demand for more, and without special effort on our part, the demand has grown so that we are now selling 100 Machines a year and our sales are continually increasing. This is the best evidence of the superior merits of the "White."

HOW LOST, HOW RESTORED
Just published, a new edition of Dr. C. W. Williams' Essay on the Radical Cure (without medicine) of SPERMATORRHOEA or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Emission, Impotency, Mental and Physical Debility, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, of Neurasthenia, Epilepsy and Hysteria, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance, etc.
The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured, pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

"SAVE THE COUNTRY FROM CORRUPTION."

SONG AND CHORUS.—Air, "Hold the Fort."

Gather, comrades, see the signal,

Democrats, draw right!

Pennsylvania gives us Hancock,

Millions raise the cry.

Chorus.—Save the country from corruption,

Break the cursed spell!

Shout aloud for equal justice,

North and South as well.

See the hosts of frauds advancing,

Do Golyer's wrong;

Oakes Ames' ghost on Garfield's shoulders,

Grinning at the throng.

Chorus.—Save the country, etc.

With false colors they are coming,

Fraud shall find its end;

In Hancock 'twill find its master,

The whole country's friend!

Chorus.—Save the country, etc.

November will tell the story,

"Written on the wall";

Right and Justice triumph ever,

Though the heavens fall.

Chorus.—Save the country from corruption,

Break the cursed spell!

Shoot aloud for equal justice,

North and South as well.

"This bayonet is not a fit instrument for collecting the votes of freemen."—Hancock's letter of acceptance.

The whole matter of the Presidency seems to me to admit of a peaceful solution.

—Hancock to Sherman, December, 1876.

The following declaration is found in a letter from General Hancock to Governor

Pease, of Texas, March 9, 1868. We be to us whenever it shall come to pass that the power of the magistracy, civil or military, is permitted to deal with the mere opinions or feelings of the people.

Those men who have soiled themselves with Credit Mobilier stock, or with back pay stealings, will never more receive honors at the hands of the Republic.

As fast as the people can get at them they will be condemned and disgraced. —Lansing

Republican, April 10, 1873. The people can now get at General Garfield, and he will be condemned and disgraced.

The Lancaster Intelligencer says:

Strange as it may appear the Democratic

State of Missouri sent more troops to the scene to fight for a restoration of the Union than did the Republican States of

New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Minnesota, Kansas, California,

Colorado, Nebraska, Oregon and Nevada, though they have 42 Republican electoral votes to Missouri's 16 Democratic electors.

There is little doubt that the Democracy will carry the following Northern States:

New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Indiana, and California. The prospect is also hopeful of the Democrats carrying Ohio,

HANCOCK'S OBEDIENCE TO LAW.

In 1877, the property of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in Philadelphia, was threatened by a mob. The torch had been applied to the lured glaze was kindling, and the bad passions of lawless men on the banks of the Delaware. Mayor Stokely put his whole Police force on duty, and in addition two companies of United States troops were sent to the scene of action, and quartered near the Depot of the Railroad. This point being in the Military Department of General Hancock, that officer came to the City, to observe the flow of events. On his arrival Mayor Stokely notified him that the Police were on duty and ready to transfer to his command. General

Hancock met the Mayor, the whole civil force was paraded and in a formal manner the latter said:

"General Hancock, I now report the Police force of the City ready to be placed under your command, for the protection of life and property in this locality."

Gen. Hancock, at once replied:

"Mayor Stokely, the Civil law is supreme in this city. You are the official representation of that law, and I am ready to cooperate with the force under my command, when the proper moment arrives. Until that time comes, you are in command. The Civil law is supreme, and the military were withdrawn."

This is another instance of the respect for Civil law which is a leading feature in the character of General

Hancock. His policy for the future will insure the reign of civil law in all parts of the Nation.

GENERAL GARFIELD CONVICTS

HIMSELF.

General Garfield's testimony before the De Golyer investigating committee is a characteristic instance of his habit of prevarication. He declared in his vindictive speech to his constituents in 1876 that he had labored hard during most of a night in preparing the brief of argument for the De Golyer committee for which he received the $5,000 fee, and that he argued the case before the Washington board of public works.

When before the investigating committee as a witness he was asked first whether he filed an argument with the board and he answered that he had "an impression that he filed it, but was not "certain." Two years before he boldly told his constituents that he argued the case before the board. He was next asked by the committee whether he at

MY OLD HOME.

The pump is broken, the chain is rusty.

And the water, once pure, is foetid and musty;

The robin that sang on the nodding spray,

Grows weary of silence and flows away;

The brambles have covered the ivy vine,

And in through the shattered windows twine.

The stoop is broken and fallen down.

And covered with moss is the threshold brown;

The storm sweeps wild through the open door,

And the rank weeds spring through the broken floor.

The roof is fallen out and in

The swallows fit in the twilight dim.

The apple tree stands by the garden wall,

And in its dead branches, knotty and tall,

Hangs the red we throw in childish glee,

To knock the apples from the tree;

The tree is dead, and on the hill

The rest lies in death and still.

And in the home that once was mine,

When I was young and in my prime,

There's nothing to me that seems the same

But the babbling brook at the foot of the lane.

Which, as it murmurs, seems to say:

You and your home are old and gray.

O faces fair! Oh, hearts so strong!

Ye in the grave have lain so long,

And yet I almost seem to hear

Your merry voices ringing clear,

Happy and glad, full of joys

Were the days when we were girls and boys.

Good-bye, old home! in the shadows dim

I'll sadly sing my evening hymn—

That we sang together when we were young,

And the path of life had just begun,

The path is ended by all save me,

And I with my lost ones soon shall be.

Apple Blossoms.

One Monday morning in May when Mr.

Castor, of the law firm of Castor & Brush, entered his office he found on his desk a bunch of fragrant white flowers with that delicate blush at the heart that makes apple blossoms so irresistible.

"Apple blossoms, sir," his clerk explained.

"I spent Sunday in the country, and brought them down, thinking you might like to see some."

Mr. Castor's preoccupied face lighted up with pleasure. "Thank you, Mr. Clark," he said. "Get some water, will you, John?"

We must keep them as fresh as we can. I shall want to take some home to my wife to-night. There, that looks quite country like, doesn't it, Clark?" Arranging the blossoms to advantage against the law books and fanning back a little to look at the effect.

Clark smiled, and Mr. Castor went to work at his law cases. But something was the matter with him. His thoughts would go wandering off to the green meadow by the side of the river where Clark told him he had broken the fragrant branch.

THE EEL.

The eel, like the catfish, lives in the mud on the river bottom, and many methods are adopted to capture the slippery creature. The eel is merely a long, thin, snake-like creature, and is also a favorite pastime with many, but as it requires wading in mud and water to hunt out its habitation, it is withal disagreeable and dirty. The eel is very tenacious of life, and can be kept for many days after being caught. Its home is under the stumps, in the hollows, in mud banks, around the bridge and wharf-plings, and under bunches of long river-grass. The usual method employed to take the eel is with the float, or "cork," line. The line of hemp is from eight to twelve feet long, with small hook and sinker of lead. The float may be either of wood, cork or quill. The hook should be three inches above the sinker, the latter lying on the bottom. The float should be adjusted in such a manner after the depth of water has been ascertained, so that it will swim in a perpendicular position on the surface. Worms are acknowledged to be the best bait for float-lines, and it should be firmly fastened on the hook as the peculiar shape of the mouth of the eel enables it to strip the worm from the hook by sucking. The bite of the eel is a succession of gentle nibbles, and it is difficult to tell at times that you have hooked one.

Fine wire may be substituted for the White frosts in Louisiana on the 17th and 18th inst. The Richmond Beacon says the most crop is very good in that State this year.

Attention is called to the advertisement of Messrs. Borden & Alexander in this week's paper. Don't forget to read the locals of these gentlemen either. They no doubt will prove interesting.

Mrs. E. L. Grant has a fine heifer, three years old, she is desirous to sell. Stock all good milkers. Apply to her at her residence or at this office.

The Richmond (Louisiana) Beacon of the 23rd says horse thieves are growing numerous in that vicinity. The editor recommends a little help as a corrective.

The Montgomery Adv. & Mail says the "State Fair" promises to be a great success, and to display the enterprise, progress and aims of Montgomery.

The Catholics will hold a Fair in Montgomery commencing on the 1st of Nov. for the benefit of their church edifice.

If you want a good smoke, call on Borden & Alexander for Cigars and Pipes.

WANTED TO SELL—A blind horse in tolerable condition. Apply to this office. Oct. 30—tf.

Soda, Soda, Starch, Spice, Pepper and Ginger—cheaper than elsewhere, at Borden & Alexander's.

An Imposter.
For the information of our Masonic friends we publish the following which we clip from the Montgomery Advertiser of the 25th inst.
Mr. R. H. Junkin, Secretary of Lewiston Lodge No. 203, N. A. M., has issued the following warning:
A man representing himself as O. H. No. 1, and claiming to be a member of the Georgia Central Lodge, is fraudulently using the name of the Georgia Central Lodge in the city of Montgomery. He is a Knight Templar, and carries a copy of the Grand Compendium of the State of Georgia. He has also in his possession railroad passes on some of the principal roads of the country. He looks like a German or Polish Jew. He is quite a linguist, and very apt to deceive. He is about five feet five inches high, brown mustache, weight about 140 pounds, eyes light blue, dark or yellow complexion, and with a black beard and hair. He is a native of the State of Georgia, and has been in the city of Montgomery for some time. He is a very clever imposter, and is capable of doing any and every thing to obtain money from the Masonic fraternity here, but a telegraph wire has been stretched from the city of Montgomery to the city of Lewiston, and every thing else you want in the grocery line.

OBITUARY.

Hon. Larkin W. Cannon.
Hon. L. W. Cannon, Probate Judge of Calhoun County, Alabama, died at his residence in Jacksonville on the 4th day of October A. D. 1880. At the time of his death he was sixty years of age. He had been almost a constant sufferer for several years previous to his death, but without returning of any duty.

He was born in Spartanburg, District S. C. and spent his boyhood there, and when only 18 years old, cast his lot in with the noble men and women who first moved to the Northern portion of Alabama, and who brought no capital save their brain and muscle, and who knew no roll of business in their dealings but that of honesty for honesty's sake. He won their confidence and respect, and retained them to the end, inasmuch that not one of them surviving, will withhold the plaudit: "Well done friend of our earlier days—sleep in death the well earned peaceful sleep that the noblest of God's creation alone can claim."

And now, that came after these, that none will be known beside you, and who knew you, as a counsellor, friend, father, would in this notice render our feeble tribute to your memory. A Christian character without blemish, moral worth, let the records speak. Unquestionable integrity, were base ingratitude to doubt it. Of paternal affection and devotion to his offspring, the feeblest tongue that lived "Grandpa" could in volumes speak. Though last, yet not so long as human hearts beat, and thy blood shall through them flow, thy virtues will not be untold.

We miss you, and your unerring counsel shall no more be to us the friend in need—but with obedient hearts we commit thee to the full enjoyment of that hope that stayed thy soul on Him who gave it, and in patience wait the end that will find thee in the blissful field of Paradise—Rich reward to faithful servant given.

No bitter scoffings can stir thy heart. No treacherous tongue beguile thy way. But in the Eden of God's love Thy soul in endless peace will stay.

A Nevada paper tells how some fishermen were surprised while fishing at Pyramid lake. They caught a small fish, and built a fire which spread, and greatly to their surprise set fire to jets of gas from natural wells. They found no less than nine of the jets within a circle of about five rods. The gas was found to proceed from little holes from half an inch to an inch in diameter and the flames were ten to twelve feet high. They left the jets burning when they went up camp, and a few days later they found the wells still burning. A Puente Indian went with them. Lighting a stick he went some rods further up the valley and touched off a dozen or more jets that were fed from holes upon and around a little hillock.

"I dess," said a little sis yesterday, "it Dad was here now he'd make a lot o' folks. 'Tis awful dusty to-day."

There are three kinds of people in the world—the wits, the won'ts and the can'ts. The first accomplish everything; the second oppose everything; the third fail in everything.

Miss Daisy, daughter of General Jones M. Withers, was married on the 30th inst. to Alvin Calhoun Humphries, Esq. On the morning of the 6th inst. she was a corpse. The notices of her marriage and death occurred in the same issue of the Atlanta Constitution. Gen. Withers is a Mobilian.—Selma Daily Times.

Mrs. Vanderbuilt, widow of the late Commodore Vanderbuilt and an Abolitionist, as a testimonial of her personal regard for Mrs. Bancroft, wife of Rev. Bancroft, and as a token of love for her native State, sent on Monday last, a check for $100 for the benefit of the Methodist parsonage in Tuskegee.

An Eastern editor throws up the sponge with the remark that "it doesn't pay to run a paper in a town where the business men read almanacs and pick their teeth with the tail of a herring."

Take all the sorrows out of life and you take away all richness, and depth and tenderness. Sorrow is the furnace that melts selfish hearts together.

In three months I was perfectly cured. I have written on my paper, briefly mentioning how my dear husband and I have been cured to any one writing me for them and for a hundred letters. In reply I have written them to "do likewise." From a great deal of correspondence I have seen that what commenced the use of Favorite Prescription to fully and plainly treat treatment so fully and plainly Favorite Prescription is sold by all druggists and is Common-Sense Medical Advice. It is peculiar to Women. Send postpaid for a copy of the book.
